

LIVE THE LIFE YOU IMAGINED

I once read that champions can see the invisible. In art school that was a given, but we were taught that even if you think your eyes are open, open them wider because you are missing something that you are not ready to see yet. That something might even be as plain as day, right in front of you.

Freedom is important; the kind of freedom that comes from making a decision and having the power to see things through to fruition. This has always been how I have tried to live my life: To do what I say I will do, and look back only to figure out how I could do it better next time. If it gets hard, remember to welcome the discomfort because that is growth. There are no shortcuts to anything worthwhile, so what will you tell yourself to make things happen? The only roadblock in your way is usually you.

I had first heard of Arbonne 11 months ago, from my trusted client and friend, ERVP Paige Miller. At that time, Paige was not a DM yet. I have always respected her business savvy and admired her sense of self and truth. When she mentioned the Arbonne opportunity, I was all ears, even though I was skeptical. I was not excited about trying the product though, because my extremely sensitive skin has always been a stop sign to using most products on the market; even specialty products. So why would I spend a dime on these products, let alone get excited about them? Or so I thought.

I loved the NutriMinC® RE⁹ anti-aging product line right away. Even what I had come to know as my normal skin condition improved immediately after I used the products. I realized that I had been putting irritants on my skin my whole adult life. When the dryness was gone in three days, and it was the middle of winter, that is when I really got excited! When a product works that well, in the middle of winter and on extremely sensitive skin, it convinced me, the biggest skeptic of all! I had already been told about the compensation plan, but a phenomenal product and an opportunity like this does not come along every day.

“ It is not what you know, but what you are willing to learn. ”

There is no doubt this Arbonne opportunity exists, because in less than one year, I have been able to potentially phase out of a job that was not fulfilling. I was secretly embarrassed to acknowledge that I have more passion for Arbonne than for my art. Who would have thought that someone who could not have cared less about skin care would care so much about a skin care company?

One incredible aspect of this business is that you get to partner with dynamic and courageous people from all walks of life; people who do not necessarily need the opportunity, but who see it. It makes for such a pleasurable, “I am in the right place,” kind of feeling. And my advice is this: You have to be honest with your upline, because this is a time for growth, not excuses. Remember that your upline is here, and they have your best interests in their heart, whatever your goal is.

Thank you to ERVP Paige Miller: I am so blessed to have you as my sponsor, mentor and friend. You are so real and realistic, and you always give 100 percent of yourself. Thanks for having the courage to approach me. You enhance the lives that you are a part of.

To NVP Heather Jones: Thank you so much, sweetie, for giving 1,000 percent of yourself to everyone you come in contact with. You are a revered coach and mentor to so many, including me.

To Julie Francis: I miss you and appreciate your wisdom.

Thank you to ERVP Dana Huston, ERVP Chris Robinson and ENVP Janet Elliott for being such wonderful and inspiring women.

I love my team, and am so proud and humbled by their efforts. I want this so much for you. Thank you to EAM Kirsten Hammersley, who will be my first RVP. You are my role model of hard work, and I cannot wait for your success. To EAM Kathy Brant: I love you, sweetie, and I am glad you are here. To AM Vilma Sevilla: If all of this went away today, I would walk away with a beautiful and lasting friendship that is important to me.

To DM Dee Bennett, I have two words for you: Napa Valley! To DM Lori Ballard: I am glad that you are on my team because you make it fun! To DM Amy “AIM” Vangeloff: I cannot wait for your success. To DM Valerie Wenstrup: You are an inherent coach! To DM Karen Bowen, DM Amy Kennedy, Shy-Quon and Pat Jarboe: I cannot wait to see you at the top. To Erica Newkirk: I love that you have decided to do Arbonne. To my sister, Robin Young: I am so happy that you have decided to do this business with me. You love interacting with and helping women so much, and you are so great at it. You will be so successful and I can hardly wait to see it happen. Go, Dawn Olyr: I want so much for you, and just wait ... you are going to be a whirlwind of success.
